Business environments have experienced important changes in recent years, such as that direction and management of projects and the creation of value companies, have to take the appropriate step to adapt to changes in the environment in which we work.

Postgraduate in Agile Projects & Product Management responds to the need of the current markets, since its main objective is to provide guarantees to the four main demands of the industry:

- Aggregation of value .

- Reduction of time.

- Agility and reliability, adding the maximum possible value to the

- Adaptability of the development process to the evolution of the requirements and the circumstances of the environment.

This work methodology is the paradigm of the model of companies like Apple in the development of its products, giving an agile response to the needs of consumers.
